

Colombia Travel Guide

Colombian Icefields Landscape

Colombia is located in the northwest of South America and is the only country in the continent to have a coastline on the Pacific Ocean as well as the Caribbean Sea. Tourism in the country has received quite a significant boost in the recent years ever since the intensity of Colombian conflict ebbed. The natural beauty as well as the rich cultural heritage makes Colombia a tourist's delight.

Attractions

A tourist never runs out of options in Colombia, thanks to its diversity in geography, culture and history.

Historical sites: The country is chock-full of historically significant areas like San Agustín, Tayrona Park of Santa Marta, Boyacá and so forth.

Eco-Tourism: A part of the Amazon rainforest is in Colombia and that adds diversity to the flora and fauna of the country. The Amacayacu National Park as well as the Parque Nacional Natural Farallones de Cali (or should we write Farallones de Cali Natural National Park) are popular amongst tourists.

Festivals and Carnivals: Out of all the festivals that are held in Colombia, the most popular ones are the Rock at the Park – one of the largest rock festivals in Latin America – and the Blacks and Whites Festival. A majority of the festivals are held in December and January. Hence, it is advisable for tourists to visit Colombia during winters. The country gets into the Carnival mood when it hosts a number of carnivals with the most popular being the Bogotá Carnival and Barranquilla's Carnival.

Major Cities in Colombia

Bogotá: Apart from being the capital city, Bogotá is also a home to many historical monuments that are worth a visit. One should check out the Gold Museum, as well as churches such as Iglesia de Santa Clara (St. Clara Church) and Iglesia de San Ignacio (Church of San Ignacio) along with the other popular places such as Bolívar Square.

Cartagenas de Indias: It is one of the most beautiful cities of Colombia and is known for its exquisite beaches. Palaces, forts, churches, and museums present in the city create an architectural mosaic

Zipaquira: Salt Cathedral of Zipaquirá is a must-visit destination. This cathedral was constructed in the year 1995 inside the tunnel of a salt mine and is known for its architectural brilliance.

Sierra Nevada de Santa Marta: Recently declared the “world's most irreplaceable nature reserve”, Santa Marta is one of the tallest coastal mountain ranges, in the world. The place is known for its long coastlines and sandy beaches.

Cerro de Monserrate: Visitors must include the church of the Fallen Christ in its itinerary. Situated in Cerro de Monserrate, the church is believed to have holy powers. According to locals, any requests that one makes here gets fulfilled. Visiting the flea market at Mercado de las Pulgas is also an option worth trying.
